

B16 HOW WE'RE COPYING ELECTRONICALLY

PROJECT: EUROPE 2011

SUBJECT: B16 HOW WE'RE COPING ELECTRONICALLY SCRIPT

DATE: 17 JUNE 2011

UPDATE

We're becoming adjusted to life on the road even though it is gypsy-like. Louise and I have accepted specific responsibilities so we can stop leaving a trail of forgotten items in various B&B's. I am responsible for tomorrow's communications so each night, before bedtime, I get down on my hands and knees, bow my head and begin the search for wall plugs. Each night I must find lifeblood for the cellphone, the iPad, the still camera and the video camera. Life was a lot simpler fifty-two years ago when we couldn't afford, therefore didn't own, any sophisticated communications devices.

Thanks to those of you who have offered encouragement, commentaries and even good-natured complaints about our journey and resultant blog. We've discovered that a blog is a machine that must be fed or it shrivels up but you're not really convinced it's worth the effort. It's like getting up each day, opening the shutters and shouting at the wind. Never sure we're being heard, we still feel better for doing it. After reading our blog, we hope you are of the same opinion.

In the next episode we'll tell you about our experiences with French B&B's.
